Gravity is everywhere!

When Baby drops food from his high chair, he's not making a mess—he's testing gravity! Why do noodles fall? Why do berries fall? Why do they hit the ground at the same time? From food on the floor, to sliding down a slide, to the moon moving across the sky in its orbit, Baby interacts with the fundamental force of gravity. Accurate enough to satisfy an expert, yet simple enough for baby, Baby Loves Science is little books about big ideas!

Smart babies use algorithms

When Baby wants her red train, she takes a precise path around the coffee table with an exact number of steps to her toy box. Success! She achieves her goal! That's just what happens in a computer program: a precise program, built with code, tells a computer what to do. As Baby figures out the best steps to get her toy, she is utilizing the thought processes of a coder. Today's babies are truly digital natives, surrounded by computers. The future is at their fingertips!

A house in a book!

Some animals build nests, some live in a hole in the ground, and some insects live in books. Caldecott Honor recipient Steve Jenkins gives young readers a tour of the residences of fourteen different animals. Some fish live in bubbles under water, beavers build lodges, some kangaroos live in trees, and then there are those book bugs. Just like humans, animals need a place to stay safe, keep warm, and raise their families.

Robbin Gourley's stylized yet realistic watercolor illustrations prove that nonfiction can be accurate and elegant.

Backmatter includes more information about each animal—their habits and their habitats.

"Hatch is shut."
"Cleared to launch."

At the start of the film Titanic, when the discovery team sends a deep-sea submersible to explore the ship's wreckage. That submersible was the Alvin.

Readers are invited to imagine themselves piloting Alvin, going two miles down to explore the bottom of the ocean four years after a volcanic explosion. As you dive down, you see the colors of the sea change from light to total darkness; you see strange animals; you must observe and carefully collect samples for study.

In expressive, poetic language, the mysteries of the deep sea are revealed. Backmatter includes an author's note about researching this book, a glossary, and suggested further reading.

Michelle A. Cusolito won the 2016 PEN New England Susan P. Bloom Children's Book Discovery Award for an early version of Flying Deep. Michelle has worked as a fourth-grade teacher, a curriculum specialist, and an adjunct professor. She lives in Rochester, Massachusetts.

Nicole Wong has illustrated many books for children, including To the Stars!; No Monkeys, No Chocolate; and Wild Rose's Weaving (Tanglewood Press). Nicole lives in Fall River, Massachusetts.

Don Brown is the author and illustrator of more than two dozen books for young readers, including Drowned City: Hurricane Katrina and New Orleans (Houghton Mifflin Harcourt), an Orbis Pictus Award winner and a Sibert Honor book. He has been widely praised for his resonant storytelling and expressive watercolor paintings that evoke the excitement, humor, pain, and joy of lives lived with passion. He lives in upstate New York.

For the thrill of science

Swept up by the European ballooning craze of the 1780s, Dr. John Jeffries longed to become the first person to fly across the English Channel. But first he had to outwit a rascally co-pilot, keep the balloon from bursting, and avoid crashing into the sea. The good doctor's quick-thinking solutions will surprise young readers—and keep them giggling when "lightening the load" is a relief in more ways than one. Don Brown tells this quirky true story with his usual accuracy and heart.

Backmatter includes an author's note, a list of quotation sources, and a bibliography.

Anne Sibley O'Brien's passion for multiracial, multicultural, and global subjects grew out of her experience of being raised bilingual and bicultural in South Korea. She is the author and illustrator of many books for children, including A Path of Stars, After Gandhi, and The Legend of Hong Kil Dong: The Robin Hood of Korea. Anne lives on an island in Maine.

Someone new is my friend

When Anne Sibley O'Brien's book I'm New Here was released, the New York Times noted that "Readers are placed squarely into the characters' point of view," giving insight into the immigrant child's experience. In this companion book, readers' points of view are flipped, and we see the new children from the perspective of the American kids in the classroom. There is sympathy, but also confusion. There is curiosity, but also trepidation. What each child learns, however, is that friendship and understanding close the gaps in language and culture.

Anne Sibley O'Brien is the founder of I'm Your Neighbor, an organization that promotes children's literature featuring "new arrival" cultures. Books like Someone New and I'm New Here build bridges between "new arrivals" and "long-term communities."

Dinè awe, Navajo baby, when will we hear you laugh?

In Navajo families, the first person to make a new baby laugh hosts the child's First Laugh Ceremony. Who will earn the honor in this story?

The First Laugh Ceremony is a celebration held to welcome a new member of the community. As everyone—from Baby's nima (mom) to nadi (big sister) to cheii (grandfather)—tries to elicit the joyous sound from Baby, readers are introduced to details about Navajo life and the Navajo names for family members.

Backmatter includes information about other cultural ceremonies that welcome new babies and children, including man yue (China), sanskaras (Hindu), and aquiqa (Muslim).

"This year, I wish to be kind of heart and wise of mind."

Two sisters and their grandma celebrate the Mid-Autumn Festival, a popular Chinese holiday. Their favorite part? Mooncakes, of course—along with Ah-ma's story of the ancient Chinese tale of Hou Yi, a brave young archer, and his wife, Chang'E. A long time ago, Hou Yi rescued the earth from the heat of ten suns. The Immortals rewarded him with a magic potion that could let him live in the sky with them forever. But when a thief tries to steal the potion, what will Chang'E do to keep it out of dangerous hands? The sisters are mesmerized by Ah-ma's retelling and the fact that the very mooncakes they enjoy each holiday are a symbol of this legend's bravest soul.

A unique blend of traditional folklore and contemporary customs brings the Chinese Mid-Autumn Festival to life. A recipe for mooncakes is included!

Inspired to learn her Chinese heritage, Christina Matula studied at the Chinese University of Hong Kong. She hopes her quest to write books for children will inspire readers from all backgrounds to gain interest in Chinese culture. The Shadow in the Moon is her first picture book. She lives in Hong Kong.

Pearl Law is a budding children's book illustrator. She works with pencil, ink, gouache, and Photoshop, and is the illustrator of Clap Your Hands (Cantata Learning). She lives in England.

Olive the Sheep is having trouble falling asleep—she'd rather stay up and play.

Adorable Olive had a long day and is tired. She settles in for a good night's sleep, but it isn't easy. Using techniques based in neuroscience to help children relax, fall asleep, and stay asleep, author and child psychologist Clementina Almeida presents a charming bedtime story teaching parents techniques to help their child turn off.

Why is it sometimes so hard for little ones to fall asleep? "Because," says Almeida, "the world never ceases to surprise them, . . . their mind cannot 'disconnect.'"

Sleep is essential for growing children, and backmatter provides further advice to help parents and caregivers lull children off to la-la land.

"Moses Feldman lived at one end of Flatbush Avenue, and Mohammed Hassan lived at the other."

So begins the story of Moe and Mo—one a Jewish boy shopping for Rosh Hashanah with his mother, and the other a Muslim boy shopping with his mother for Ramadan. Both growing up in Brooklyn, they meet in the middle of the street at Sahadi's Market, where they are mistaken for brothers.

A friendship is born, and the boys bring their families together to share rugelach and date cookies in the park, as they make a wish for peace under the same sliver of moon.

In this story, Rosh Hashanah, the Jewish New Year, overlaps with the Muslim holiday of Ramadan—an occurrence that happens only every thirty years or so.

Jane Breskin Zalben has created more than fifty books for children, including Mousterpiece (Roaring Book Press), Papa's Latkes (Henry Holt & Co.), and Light (Dutton). A graphic designer and former children's book art director, she teaches children's book writing, illustration, and design at the School of Visual Arts in New York City. She lives in Long Island, New York.

Mehrdohkt Amini is the illustrator of many award-winning children's books, including Chicken in the Kitchen (Lantana Publishing), Golden Domes and Silver Lanterns (Scholastic), and How the Olympics Came to Be (British Museum Press). Mehrdohkt lives in the UK.

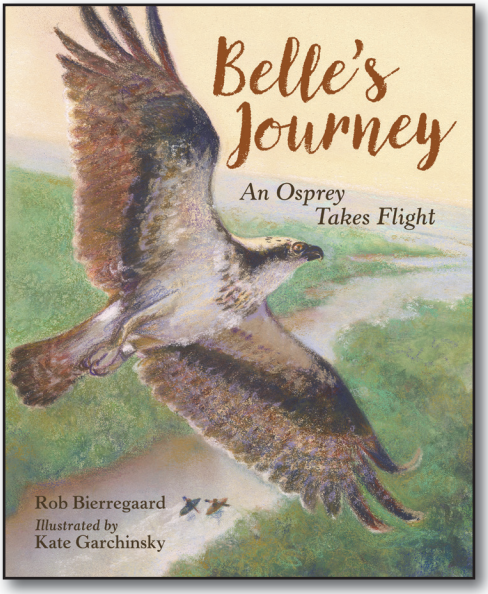
Rob Bierregaard has studied ospreys in New England since 1971. In 2000 he began tagging ospreys with satellite transmitters that enable us to follow their migration to South America and back. Belle's Journey is Rob's first children's book. He lives in Wynnewood, Pennsylvania.

Kate Garchinsky's debut picture book was The Secret Life of the Red Fox (Boyds Mills), written by Laurence Pringle. Prior to creating children's books, Kate designed toys, birdbaths, and trail maps. She lives in Edgemont, Pennsylvania.

Want to follow the ospreys, too? Go to ospreytrax.com.



4,000 miles for a home and family

For over sixteen years, Dr. Rob Bierregaard (Dr. B. to his students) has tracked osprey migration using small radio transmitters. This is the story of one of Dr. B.'s ospreys, Belle, who each spring flies 4,000 miles from her winter home in Brazil to her spring nest on Martha's Vineyard to meet her mate and start a new family. Besides the long distance, Belle must find food, weather storms, and face other dangers. Dr. B. and his companions follow Belle's journey via her transmitter. This mostly true story is based on information garnered through twenty years of research by Dr. B.

Backmatter includes further information about ospreys and their migration, as well as suggested reading and internet resources.
